

National Redress Scheme

For people who have experienced institutional child sexual abuse

FACT SHEET

GET FREE HELP TO APPLY

This fact sheet gives information on how to get support to apply to the National Redress Scheme.

What help can you get to apply?

The National Redress Scheme provides the following free, confidential support services:

- Legal support services (provided by an organisation called 'knowmore'), to provide advice about your legal options, and applying for and accepting an offer of redress,
- Redress support services to help you understand the Scheme, and guide you through the whole application process, and
- Financial counselling services to help you understand how an offer of redress might impact your personal finances.

These support services are free if you are thinking about applying for redress. You can access these services at any time when considering applying for redress, if you are applying for redress, or if you are considering an offer of redress.

Legal Support Services

Legal Support Services, provided through knowmore, can assist you:

- With information on other options available to you, including access to compensation through other schemes or common law rights and claims
- Prior to the application, to ensure you understand the access requirements and the application process
- After you receive an offer of redress and you elect to seek an internal review of the decision
- With advice on the effect of accepting an offer and what this means for future claims.
